Official Page of Canon PIXMA Wireless Setup Assistant Cracked Version Many-to-many relationship to use with JPA's `createQuery` method I'm learning Spring-data JPA, and having problems figuring out how to specify a many-to-many relationship in a request to the createQuery method. I'm also running on JPA 2.0, and I'm using MySQL as my database. So in my database I have two entities: entity A Id A_id (primary key) ... entity B Id B_id (primary key) And their corresponding ManyToMany relationships. I want to create a JPA query that will return all the A objects where the B object for a specific B_id is equal to some given B object. So far I've tried this: Query query = entityManager.createQuery("SELECT A FROM A A INNER JOIN B B WHERE A.B.id = B.id AND B.id = :id") .setParameter("id", "110"); List aList = query.getResultList(); Unfortunately, this only finds the first element that matches the given B_id. It would be awesome to be able to do something like this: Query query = entityManager.createQuery("SELECT A FROM A A INNER JOIN B B WHERE A.B.id = B.id AND B.id = :id") .setParameter("id", B_object) .list(); List aList = query.getResultList(); Thanks! A: You could do the following: Query query = entityManager.createQuery("SELECT A FROM A A INNER JOIN B B WHERE B.id = :id AND A.id IN (SELECT A.B.id
